Trump Supporter Yells To Black Protesters

By Hamm

For many years we of the black community has asked that black history in America be taught to all students at the elementary school level. Apparently our white neighbors, they are our white neighbors since we all live in these United States make us neighbors, have not been taught the history of their black neighbors history in coming to America; not as by choice or illegal border crossing, but instead forced slavery.

I'll repeat it again; blacks came to America in 1619 as slave to work and build OUR COUNTRY and made it what it is today. For over 230 years thousands of blacks labored without pay to clear the land for cotton, drain the swamps, for developments, built roads to permit ingress and egress for commerce, building wharves for shipping to dock and doing whatever slave owners wanted done to enhance their financial bottom line. Slaves worked to build the white house and capital. THEIR OWNERS WERE PAID FOR THEIR LABOR, THE SLAVES GOT NOTHING. A civil war was fought because southern slave owners wanted to keep the free slave labor they possessed and decided to secede from the union. It was decided the nation could not exist half slave and half free. The Union Army conscripted with former freed slaves proved victorious; America became a growing prosperous nation built on the free labor of slaves. TO DONALD TRUMP “IT WAS 230 YEARS OF SLAVE LABOR THAT MADE AMERICA GREAT. America today still have that greatness.

The framers did not forget black free slave labor; through the Amendment process are included protections for (Continued on page 10A)

Alabama father who lobbied for tougher child abuse penalties charged with domestic violence

Joey Crampton (center) holds his son Winston and stands with State Sen. Clyde Chambliss and State Rep. Paul Beckman who sponsored “Winston’s Law” this session in the Alabama Legislature. The bill passed last month and will become law.

A father who lobbied for tougher penalties for abusers of children was arrested on Friday on two counts of domestic violence.

Joey Crampton was charged with two misdemeanor counts of domestic violence third degree and booked into Montgomery City Jail, WSFA reported.

Crampton is accused of strangling his wife, Leah, causing her neck to bruise and throwing their 8-month-old child.

Leah Crampton claims Joey was smoking marijuana in front of his 4-year-old son Winston, whom Joey Crampton gained custody of in September of last year.

Roianne Houlton Conner, an attorney representing Leah Crampton, issued a statement on Saturday.

Leah Crampton reported the alleged assault to Montgomery police on Thursday, which led to the arrest of her husband, Conner stated. A restraining order was issued.

Subsequently, Autauga County Circuit Court granted Leah Crampton temporary custody of Winston and the (Continued on page 11A)

Revealing History Of Federal Inmates Introduction To Crime

From: Ronnie Gilley

Like so many other Inner city kids, Tyrell Plair and his brother Tyrone grew up in a life of crime. He was introduced to his first murder at the very tender and impressionable age of 5 years old. To this day, the murder is a very vivid and real memory. One, I’m sure, he wished he could forget.

Growing up on the very hard streets of inner city Chicago, he and his brother were introduced to much crime; it was nothing to see dead bodies in the back alleys, whether from gang violence or drugs. The reality of his environment struck on a very unfortunate night, while they were in a convenience store shopping with their mother.

As they stood by the back freezer selecting a carton of milk, several gang members rushed in the store and, with in front of the boys, brutally beat another man completely to death. Blood spattered onto their young faces, but instead of being afraid, they watched in awe along with their mother who was only 22 years old.

Kicking, stomping, stabbing, beating the old man with bats until his lifeless body lay still on the floor in a huge pool of blood. Their mother never once tried to cover their young faces being very much accustomed to violence herself.

The hang members knowing exactly who their mother was, due to their fathers heavy gang affiliations, never said a word, just handled thier business and walked out as if nothing happen.

That day forever changed his life. Even though Tyrell is one of the toughest men I’ve ever met, I can still sense the scars and fear, from that night, still linger. You can almost understand why he became a criminal.

From that night at the age of 5, until he reached the age of 24, Tyrell lived a life of violent crime. He found out at a very early age that he and his brother could excell on the streets and excel they did. After moving to Pensacola, Florida with their mother, they quickly became a dominate force in the drug industry.

Of course, violence was never to far behind them and neither ever turned from it. Their reputation as hard core gangsters grew at a rapid pace as did their bank accounts. Life was good ... so they thought.

The empire they were steadily building on the streets came tumbling down, almost, without warning. In 1999 Tyrell was charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and cocaine base and sentenced to twenty-years in Federal prison.

In most case, prison life has a tendency to slow one down ... especially with their violent behavior. That was not the case of Ty. It was almost as if (Continued on page 3A)

GOP stopped being ‘party of Lincoln’ long before Trump

By Jesse Jackson

Recently, House Speaker Paul Ryan denounced Donald Trump for playing footsie with David Duke and the Ku Klux Klan, saying Republicans are “the party of Lincoln.” The speaker is to be applauded for denouncing Trump’s dog whistle racial politics, but he’s got his history wrong. Today’s Republican Party is a far remove from the party of Abraham Lincoln.

Lincoln fought to save the Union, and after the Confederate surrender he moved to reconcile warring states in order “to build a more perfect Union.” Lincoln’s party introduced and ratified the 13th Amendment, legally ending slavery. Today, 20 percent of Republicans who voted for Donald Trump in South Carolina disapprove of Lincoln’s executive order freeing the slaves, according to a YouGov poll, and 70 percent want the Confederate flag to fly over the State House.

The Republican Party in Lincoln’s day introduced and ratified the 14th Amendment, guaranteeing equal protection under the law. Today’s Republican Party — the party that Trump, Ted Cruz and Marco Rubio are fighting so hard to lead — opposes any steps that actually promote equal protection or fairness. They oppose affirmative action, economic set-asides and special consideration for programs for the needy. They oppose equal pay for women. They oppose equal rights for the LGBT community.

The Republican Party in Lincoln’s day introduced and ratified the 15th Amendment outlawing discrimination in voting on the basis of race, color or previous condition of servitude. Today’s Republican Party introduced literally hundreds of legislative bills in 49 states after 2011 to enforce new voting restrictions that would disproportionately impact minorities, women, workers, young people, seniors and the disabled. Today’s Republican Party praises the conservatives on the Supreme Court who gutted the Voting Rights Act in Shelby County v. Holder, and won’t hold hearings or allow a vote on legislation to fix the damage done.

The Republican Party in Lincoln’s day built the national railroads, even as (Continued on page 2A)

Conversation of the Day:

Was Carson’s endorsement of Trump surprising or inevitable?

By Edward T. Bowser

Former presidential candidate Ben Carson is endorsing Donald Trump in the businessman’s bid for the White House.

Carson is set to announce the endorsement at a press conference on Friday morning, The Washington Post reported. Trump confirmed the endorsement during Thursday night’s GOP debate in Miami.

Carson is a retired neurosurgeon who ended his own presidential race after a poor showing in the primaries. Earlier in the campaign, Carson had risen to number two in most national polls, thanks in part to his support among conservatives and the evangelical community. He failed to maintain that momentum as the campaign season went on and his presidential bid suffered from personnel and organizational issues.

Trump has already received the endorsement of former presidential candidate Chris Christie.
